Money, Watch Missing From Dead Man's Body Constable Says

A coroner's inquest under Dr. L. W. Dales was held in the town hall on Tuesday evening to inquire into the death of Frank Williamson, Sunnyside Ave., Toronto, and Thayer Kent, Tyndall Ave., Toronto, as a result of an accident on Yonge St. early on the morning of Aug. 6.

The jury brought in the following verdict: "We the jury impelled to inquire into the death of Thayer Kent and Frank Williamson, find that they came to their death on or about Aug. 6, 1938, between 12 and 12:30 a.m., by a head-on collision between cars driven by the deceased Frank Williamson and Abe Ziggelstein, on highway No. 11, two miles north of Eagle St."

The jury was composed of Bert Morrison (foreman), Ben Wilson, Bert Hughes, Edward Boyd, Fred Lundy, John Luck, D'Arcy Miller, and Joseph Brammer. N. L. Mathews acted for the crown.

Dr. B. R. Sinclair, Bradford, who performed an autopsy on Williamson's body, testified at the inquest that he had received severe lacerations on the upper and lower lips, bruises on the legs, and several fractures, and that the injuries were sufficient to cause death. A superficial examination of Mr. Kent disclosed that the whole front of his chest had been fractured, and his neck broken.

"It was a clear night with not much traffic and I saw a car coming toward us travelling pretty fast," testified Sam Galinsky, a passenger in Ziggelstein's car. "The car suddenly turned in right in front of us and our car turned over. It looked like he was trying to cut out or pass another car. I heard no horn or brakes. Ernie Borisofsky, who was also in the back seat yelled to the driver, 'they're hitting us' then the accident happened."

"I was the first officer to arrive at the accident," testified

PRIME MINISTER KING TO SPEAK AT MULOOCK PICNIC

Col. W. P. Mulock, K.C., M.P., of the riding of North York is pleased to announce that the guest speaker at his annual picnic to be held at Woodbridge fair grounds, Saturday, Aug. 20, will be Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada. c4w20

Constable J. Sloss. "Williamson was still in the car behind the steering wheel, and he was breathing when taken from the car but he died about five minutes after he was removed. Both cars were badly damaged and Kent was lying on the east side of the road dead."

"When I arrived I found the coupe, owned by Kent and driven by Williamson, facing east with the rear bumper at the west side of the pavement," stated Provincial Constable H. Jackman. "On the east shoulder was a sedan facing south-west while the right corner was at the east edge of the pavement. I was unable to find any skid marks, but there was a deep gouge mark seven feet from the east edge and two other scratch marks. The driver of the sedan was Abe Ziggelstein."

"In the Kent car there was a strong odor of alcohol or liquor but a blood test of both Kent and Williamson, analyzed by Prof. Jocelyn Rogers, showed that there was no alcohol present and that no drinking had taken place prior to the accident."

"Some people had removed Kent's body before a police officer arrived. I was given to understand that a sum of money carried by Kent and also his gold watch were missing when we searched him. A fishing rod was also missing."

Provincial Constable A. O. Ferguson corroborated the evidence of Constable Jackman.

Constable K. Mount stated that he was present when Robt. Williamson identified the two bodies.

J. O. Little Seeks Public Support For Citizens' Band

Will Hold "Tattoo" To Aid Juniors To Graduate To Senior Band

Plans for a band tattoo, sponsored by the Newmarket Citizens' band, were outlined to council on Monday night by ex-Warden J. O. Little. He asked the council to attend as a body the meeting of Newmarket citizens which is being held on Thursday night of this week, at 8 o'clock in the town hall.

"The bandmaster is anxious to increase the number in the Citizens' band to 35," Mr. Little told the council. "There are a number of junior boys capable of stepping up into the senior band, but they lack instruments."

Some of these instruments are not usually used for solo work, he stated, and it was not fair to ask the boys to buy them. Proceeds from the tattoo would be used for band purposes, Mr. Little stated. The tattoo would be held in the park on Sept. 14. Mr. Little urged the council's attention also to another matter, the completion of a new barn building at the fair grounds.

"There is a lot of valuable timber there, and I am told that the barn could be completed by three or four men in a few days. All you would require is about two-thirds of a roof. The frame, siding and sheathing are already there," he stated.

He asked the council's co-operation and offered as "a small personal contribution," a bill for $27.80. "You can consider it paid," he said.

Hold Old Boy Reunion Next July, Association Proposes

Sportsmen Ask Council For Grant For Expenses This Year

A proposal for organization for the holding of an old boys' reunion next year was received on Monday evening from the Newmarket Sportsmen's Association. If it was the wish of the council, the association proposed, the reunion could be held for three or four days next July. Proceeds would be used for fair ground purposes, it was suggested.

"The association asked for a grant of $100 to pay for stationery, etcetera, this year. Clerical work would be done at the Express-Herald office, the proposal stated."

"I think the matter should be taken up by the council," Reeve Dr. L. W. Dales said. "The council should meet with the association and have equal representation on a committee. I think there should be very careful bookkeeping on the old boys' reunion."

"I think the council should discuss it," Deputy-Reeve Joseph Vale stated. "I am not in favor of holding the reunion."

"Let's have the other organizations in town on it," Councilor W. W. Osborne suggested. "If there are going to be proceeds, why should the town pay money for a grant?" asked Town Clerk N. L. Mathews, K. C.

It was decided that the council should meet with the Sportsmen's Association this week and discuss the matter further.

CAIN CHALLENGES MOLYNEUX

"For the past year considerable controversy and discussion has been going on between Herbie Cain, of the Montreal Maroons, and Larry Molyneux, of the New York Rangers, both Newmarket boys, concerning their golfing ability," J. L. Spillette told The Era this week.

To settle once and for all, to remove all doubt, Joe Spillette, who is managing Mr. Cain, is challenging on behalf of Herbie Cain, the said Larry Molyneux to 18 holes, catch-as-catch-can, winner-take-all, and no holds barred.

"Time and course will be decided between the player's respective managers. C. W. Holmes, it is understood, has offered his services in Mr. Molyneux's corner."

Preaches Here 3 Years, Resigns

The resignation of Rev. Dr. Warner S. Alexander, pastor of the Christian-Congregational church, was accepted at a board meeting of the church on Monday evening.

Dr. and Mrs. Alexander are now on holidays in the United States, and the resignation came by letter, to take effect immediately.

Dr. Alexander believes that since his accident a year ago when he suffered a broken neck, the Newmarket pastorate has been too large for him to handle sufficiently well, and he has now accepted a smaller charge in Ohio.

It is just three years this summer since they came to Newmar-

ELEPHANT, LIONS THRILL CHILDREN AT CLUB CIRCUS

A large and happy crowd attended the Newmarket Lions club carnival, held on the Stuart Scott school grounds Wednesday evening. Work among Newmarket's underprivileged children, such as dental work, cases to clinics, hospital care and doctor's treatment will benefit as a result.

There was a fish pond, and booths with all kinds of "try your luck" games, spinning wheels, bingo, etc.

Lion H. E. Gilroy made a very capable master of ceremonies at the bingo table and, perched high in the air, with a bell which he rang at frequent intervals, drew throngs to his table.

Lions Wilfred Duffy and Bill White were kept busy spinning wheels, and Lions Andy White and W. M. Cockburn were at the counters behind which were displayed a large collection of beautiful dolls. In fact, every Lion had something to do to help make the carnival a great success.

A real circus, with real animals, which thrilled Newmarket's younger citizens, and older ones, too, was a feature at the Lions club carnival.

A black bear, an elephant, four lions, 18 monkeys, 12 trained horses and ponies, 12 trained dogs, pigeons, a baboon, and saddle horses staged a very excellent performance.

Captain Schoutt's circus, as it is known, has travelled over Canada during the past four months. There is a crew of nine, and they plan to stay in Newmarket the rest of the week.

Winners in the lucky draw were:

1, refrigerator, Rev. Dr. W. D. Muckle; 2, grandfather's clock, J. B. Bastedo; boy's bicycle, S. Slater; Arrprior; 4, cedar chest, Jim Schmidt; Sutton; 5, electric "mix-master", Chas. Lockett; 6, 100 pounds of sugar, John Terry; 7, coffee dripulator, Mrs. Alice Graham; 8, hamper of groceries, M. L. Law, Newmarket; S. Sheppard, Holland Landing; W. Garhouse, Weston; doll raffle, Marjorie Smith.

All Crop Yields Improved This Year, Smith States

Not So Pleased With Prospects Of Good Prices For Producers

"In general there seems to be a good yield of every crop we grow," stated Fred N. Smith, manager of the Newmarket Farmers' Co-operative store. "There is plenty of feed for the animals for winter and an abundance for both man and beast. Recent rains have improved pastures. This year is better than average, so far as production is concerned."

W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative, who had just returned from a two weeks vacation when called on by The Era reporter, stated that the wheat crops were generally good all over the county before he left for his holiday and that he thought the recent rains around here would continue to improve the crops. The yield is above average but prices are already lower than last year at this time, Mr. Cockburn said.

The wheat crop is reported good in all parts around here, according to Mr. Smith. The average yield is about 40 bushels to the acre. In some sections there is slight damage, caused by rust or grasshoppers, but rust is usually in low places where there is excess moisture.

The price of wheat at the present time is only 60 to 65 cents a bushel, so the price will not likely be very big. Mr. Smith told The Era reporter. Oats and barley will yield better than last year, and coarse grains are better, but straw is not as long as usual.

According to present indications potatoes will be quite cheap this fall as there is a good yield. Mr. Smith stated. There seems to be an abundance of all kinds of vegetables so prices are low. It is expected there will be a good harvest of asparagus and red clover.

"The farmers will not get enough for their labor even though they harvest a bumper crop," Mr. Smith contended. "There will have to be an improvement in the economic conditions so that the farmer will be assured decent money for his crop. As it is now, a bumper crop means less money to the

ELEPHANT FEEDS ON CHOICE GREENS FIRST TRIP HERE

By GOLDEN GLOW

All Wednesday morning, we were repeatedly hearing queer roars which we could in no way account for; and likewise we saw a steady stream of excited small boys and girls, too, trotting along the street, but we did not connect it with the roaring sounds.

However, when our vegetable man called, he enlightened us. He took it in good part, the story he was about to tell, even though it must have cost him a dollar or more.

It seems that there were some animals over at the Stuart Scott school grounds, in connection with the Lions club carnival last evening, real honest-to-goodness animals too, by the sound of their roars . . . monkeys, a lion, and, best of all, an elephant, so far as I could make out.

My vegetable man was coming along Lorne Ave., well-loaded, he said, with baskets of vegetables even on his running-board. We all know Lorne Ave. is rather rough, and consequently some baskets were bumped off. Before he could turn about, and return to retrieve his vegetables, a host of small boys fell with a whoop and a yell on the fresh carrots, lettuce, cabbage and green peas and beans, and in the twinkling of an eye were feeding them to the elephant.

Needless to say the elephant enjoyed the feast but the treat was not at the expense of the small boys, but at the expense of the vegetable grower. He took it in good part, and ended his story smiling and saying "Boys will be boys—we'd have done it ourselves."

farmer than a small yield as he receives a much lower price. "Pork and poultry prices are holding well but beef is not so promising," continued Mr. Smith. "Cheap grain should aid the poultry men and assist the dairy men provided there is no reduction in the price of milk."

VERN WILLIAMS APPOINTED SPECIAL CONSTABLE

Vern Williams, well-known in Newmarket, was sworn in as special police constable by Magistrate W. F. Woodliffe, at police court here on Tuesday.

Following the business of the court, Williams stood before the magistrate and took the oath. This new appointment to the police force will provide relief for an overworked staff. Since the opening of the new police cells, Chief Constable Jim Sloss and Constable Kenneth Mount have been on duty for 16 hours a day.

Another reason given for the appointment was that it would avoid having Constables Sloss and Mount working a seven-day week, it was stated at council on Monday.

UNION CONTINUES WAGE ARGUMENT

The disagreement between the Paradise Waist Co. and the International Ladies Garment Workers union has not yet reached a settlement, The Era learns this week. The following is a portion of the statement issued by C. Foster, business agent of the union, on Wednesday:

"The statement of the Paradise Waist Co. in the Aug. 11 issue of The Era needs some clarification," Mr. Foster states. "The union scale for a cutter is $30 for 44 hours. When the cutter, who is not 18 years of age, but is experienced, was found in the shop getting $12 per week, we gradually raised him up to $18, which is still below the scale."

"The wages quoted for presser, finisher and operator are taken from a peak week in the season, when overtime was worked. This firm did not use a time clock to register hours worked. These wages are for a peak week. There are still 51 other weeks in the year that people must live. When the year's wages are tallied and an average reached, we are still prepared to prove our statements that the girls did not make the minimum of $12.50."

"Our aim is to force this firm to live up to a two-year agreement signed with our union. Forcing them to re-establish in Toronto is in the interest of the workers whom they threw out of employment."

NAMED BEST OF ITS CLASS

"Canada's Best Weekly Newspaper" in the 1,000-2,000 circulation group, is the proud title won by The Era for the third time in four years. It was learned from a Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association bulletin this week, and the news of the high honor to Newmarket and The Era was echoed over the radio and in the daily press across Canada.

The Charles Clark Cup, emblematic of Canadian leadership, will rest in The Era office in 1938, therefore, gleaming as brightly as it did when it rested there in 1935 and 1936.

The Bulletin, outlining the results of the competition in which 28 papers sought the Clark Cup, states:

"In the 1,000-2,000 group the first award for the best all-round paper goes to Newmarket Era, with the Kelowna Courier and the Listowel Banner as runner-ups for certificates."

"A close study of the Newmarket Era in relation to the tests, as well as a study of it apart from the set tests, reveals it to be a well constructed paper."

"It has plenty of local and district features, a good editorial page, and a good front page. It uses illustrations, and it makes up its pages according to good patterns."

"Quite obviously, its editor-publisher, A. O. Hebb, puts a lot of thought into the making of each issue."

The honor which came to The Era with the Clark Cup was nearly doubled by an additional honor, the M. A. James Memorial Shield for the best front page. The Bulletin states, in this connection:

"The award goes to Kelowna Courier, though it was a toss-up—whether this paper's front page or that of Newmarket Era should be placed first. The two papers have different concepts regarding front page make-up and styling."

"Probably that of the Newmarket Era will be regarded the best for most weeklies."

Details of the competition gave further light on other departments of The Era. Where the average advertising achievement as related to circulation is 27 per cent, The Era had an achievement of 37.5 per cent.

In local advertising, The Era ranked in the first three with a rating of 60 per cent. The Springfield Recorder had 70.1 and the Acton Free Press, 72.4 per cent.

COMPLIMENTS

Dr. S. J. Boyd, mayor: "I think Newmarket should be proud of having such a high class paper. Mr. Hebb deserves a great deal of credit for the success of his paper. No doubt with the co-operation of his efficient staff he will go on to even higher standards."

Col. W. P. Mulock, K.C., M.P.:

"It is certainly a wonderful accomplishment to be awarded that honor the third time in four years. Mr. Hebb deserves the heartiest congratulations."

Arthur Evans, councillor: "I think it is very fine to win this prize. I think we're all pleased to hear of it and I hope that Mr. Hebb keeps up the good work."

Charles McCauley, fruit merchant: "The general tone of the paper is of an up-to-date character."

J. L. Spillette, merchant: "This is a wonderful achievement on the part of Mr. Hebb, who is to be very much complimented on winning the prize for three years."

H. M. Gladman, express agent: "The editor should be congratulated on the fine honor and publicity he has brought to our town."

C. F. Willis, tailor: "Newmarket should be justly proud of Mr. and Mrs. Hebb and staff for producing the best weekly newspaper across Canada by winning the Clark cup this year for the third time."

E. Gilroy, men's furnishings: "It is very commendable indeed for the town of Newmarket to win this honor."

H. V. Higginson, councillor: "I would like to congratulate the editor."

W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative: "I believe Mr. Hebb and his staff deserve every congratulation for bringing this honor to Newmarket."

N. L. Mathews, K.C., clerk and solicitor: "Mr. Hebb and The Era staff have brought a lot of honor to the town and certainly deserve a great deal of credit. I think the paper is steadily improving and I think Mr. Hebb has done well."

H. E. Lambert, manager, Bank of Toronto: "Every congratulation in the world. Great work."

J. Sloss, chief constable: "Congratulations to the editor and his staff."

Dr. W. D. Muckle, of St. John's R. C. church: "I just dropped in to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Hebb on their fine achievement."

New Customer!

Bill White's service station, Eagle St., received a rather unusual customer this morning for refuelling. The elephant, belonging to the circus which is being held on the Stuart Scott school grounds this week, was taken to Mr. White's for his morning drink of water.

It takes 15 minutes for the huge animal to refresh himself and he drinks between 45 and 50 gallons at once. A hose is used for the job. Three such trips to the refuelling station are made daily.

PUBLIC HEALTH NURSE

If you must knock, it is better to knock at someone well removed from your own town. So it happened that we were knocking the Bowmanville town council for forcing, in the name of economy, the dismissal of a public health nurse at a cost of $1,200 to the council and recommending employment of a Victorian Order Nurse at a cost of $500 to the council but of a total of $2,500 to the people of the town. The editor of the Canadian Statesman has gone away to Vancouver to attend the annual Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association convention and in his absence the town council are taking a turn at writing the editorials. We let them give their side of the nurse question:

"Two Vexed Problems," Is Their Title

"Perhaps the two most difficult problems that your council have had to decide upon, was 'the re-appointment of a public health nurse' and 'the assessing upon the ratepayers, a sufficient sum requested by the high school board for an extension to our high school.'"

"At the beginning of this year, the council resolved that in every way possible, estimates and expenditures for the year must be cut down to the very lowest point, in keeping, of course, with a wise and careful outlay, on all public works, and other departmental operations, during the year. With this idea ever before us, we, along with other problems, fully and carefully considered the question of the advisability of appointing a public health nurse, whose salary and expenses were being charged up to the current tax revenue account of the town."

"After much discussion and prolonged consideration, it was resolved to recommend to the board of health that this service be discontinued at the close of the contract, and that steps be taken to get in touch with the Victorian Order of Nurses, with headquarters at Ottawa, with a view to having that part-time service presented to the council and ratepayers at an early date. Your council claim that the former service was a social service and those employing it should pay for it, and not the regular taxpayer, with this one exception, that where a family is on relief or known to be worthy in need, it should be supplied with the very best medical and nursing attention possible to obtain, and the cost of same be charged to our regular tax revenue account. We have been severely criticized by some but highly commended by others, for our decision on this question, but feel satisfied it will work out for the good of all the ratepayers."

"The other outstanding problem was the request of the high school board. In this connection it is but fair to point out that the high school board's estimates for the year had been passed some months before, and the tax papers were in the hands of the ratepayers. Your council had no way of supplying the money asked for, only by borrowing from the bank at current interest, (and we think we already are paying far too much interest each year), or raising it by debenture loans. The question of borrowing at interest we could not favor. To issue debentures, it was absolutely necessary that we first submit a by-law to the ratepayers at the next municipal election."

"Even if a favorable expression had been given by public vote, we would still have to secure the permission from the provincial municipal board at Toronto, before same could be issued. It is public knowledge that that board has not approved of the action of certain nearby town councils in dealing with this high school extension problem. So your council are gratified in two ways over their decision, they will not be turned down by the municipal board, nor overburdened an already heavily taxed group of ratepayers."

"It would not be just or fair, however, to say, as has already been stated that your mayor and council have caused, 'education to take a backward step,' by their careful and well considered action in this matter."

"The members of council are always ready and willing to co-operate in any good and proper project, for the improvement and advancement of our town's best interests and the well-being of its people, but there are certain limits beyond which we cannot conscientiously go, when considering the financial obligation we would have to lay upon the ratepayers, who after all, have elected us to 'take good care of all their interests. We voted to 'defer action' on this question. The next step as we see it, is to submit a by-law to the people for support or rejection, next January."

TWO SIDES TO EVERYTHING

The best athlete is the fairest athlete. The best debater is the fairest debater. The best debater is the one who tries to see the other fellow's viewpoint. He digs into the subject and works up the other fellow's arguments and finds the answers to those arguments. Perhaps in the process he may decide that he is wrong and the other fellow is right. Before Abraham Lincoln reached any important decision, he made a practice of arguing with intimates the opposite side of the case to that he proposed to take. Friends were astonished to find him arguing one side of the case, and then doing the other.

Taxation Question

Moderation must always be the key to helpful discussion of public affairs. There are two sides to most questions, or else they are not questions. There is as much truth in an over-statement of the right side of an argument as in mild statement of the wrong side. So we think, anyway. At the moment we have in mind the Globe and Mail's "How Far Can Taxation Go?" article. In the issue of Saturday, Aug. 13, there is an article, on the front page, which is nothing less than a tirade against taxation. The article rails against taxation in every form. The only admission in the long article that taxation is a necessary function, and the source of many blessings, is one sentence: "While there is a common obligation to chip in to preserve law and order and provide essential services, the amount of taxation now being levied under authority for compulsory payments has reached the punishment stage."

Let's Be Specific

No doubt taxation can go too far and the Globe and Mail, with its resources, could perform a great service by having experts study government expenditures and government methods of raising revenues and present detailed criticisms. Let the Globe and Mail tell us which expenditures we could get along without!

RIDING TOGETHER

It's good to see the Liberal premier of Ontario and the Conservative (he is more than that anything else) premier of Quebec riding in a farm wagon on the Hepburn farm. These two rebellious premiers are doing a great deal to break down long-standing party prejudices which have outworn their usefulness. Both have won followers from the enemy camp and both have driven a good many out of their own camps. By all the old rules, they should be deadly enemies instead of bosom pals, riding together and even at times pulling together.

WE SHOULD INTEREST OURSELVES

It is amazing that there is so little criticism in this country of the course pursued in foreign affairs by Premier Neville Chamberlain. There is plenty of criticism in the old country, but in Canada our attitude seems to be that the British government is always right. That is a very useful attitude in many ways, and yet it may get us into a lot of trouble. News dispatches to United States newspapers, whether right or wrong, say that Britain is prepared to go the whole way in sacrificing Czechoslovakia to appease Germany. It seems to us that we in Canada, with less occasion for alarm because of our greater distance from the trouble zone, should do all we can to instill new life into the League of Nations. The League idea is the only hope for permanent peace.

MACHINE AGE YET TO COME

Henry Ford at 75 years says: "Machine age! It has not even started yet. We're just getting into the machine age. There isn't any choice about it. In spite of all the discussion of it, people do not realize yet how well they will be able to live in a few years hence, and with how little physical labor. But that will require more and better thinking all along the line. We must improve people as thinking beings, as fast as we are improving machinery."

Best Yet To Come

It is grand to see a man of years who thinks the best is yet to come. Ford could see the motor-car age before the motor-car age came. He played an important part in its development. He built cars for use all over the world. Today he sees another vision, of mechanical progress raising our standard of living and increasing our leisure. We pray that these things may come speedily not for the sake of those who are working hard to make a living but for the sake of the thousands who are not getting an opportunity to make a living or to make the most of themselves. We pray that these things may come speedily so that men will not again go to war with each other to destroy each other and each other's goods.

What It Cost

Here is what Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, estimated some time ago, according to the Rural Co-operator, as the cost of the great war of 1914-1918.

"The world war, which cost the participants $400,000,000,000, would have bought five acres of land, a $2,500 house, $1,000 of equipment for every family in the United States, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Russia, Germany and Australia. It also would have provided a $5,000,000 library and a $10,000,000 university for every city of 20,000 or more population in all these countries. In addition it would have provided an endowment fund permanently paying for 25,000 teachers and 125,000 nurses. And there would still have been enough left over to buy France and Belgium."

TIMES CHANGE

An industrialist expressed the opinion to the writer the other day that industry must keep pace with modern social trends or reap a whirlwind of discontent. Industry must think of its employees as human beings, was his thought, or else bring upon itself labor troubles or bring upon the entire country unpleasant doses of fascism or communism or both. No man lives who knows whether our modern industrial and economic machine can run smoothly or not. It never has but it does not follow that it cannot. There are many people who believe that, if industry would treat its employees and its customers as fairly as possible, most of our present-day troubles would be solved.

That means that if industry always paid wages as high as justified by its earnings, gave hours as short as justified, holidays with pay, contributory health and sickness insurance, pensions on retirement, there would be no serious depressions, no strikes, no antagonism between employers and employees. We must confess ourselves pessimistic about the possibility of ever getting away from depressions and economic discontent, short of a great deal more direct government control over business, or, if you like, without a great deal more socialism, than we have today. Nevertheless, the sane course is to try first everything possible to make private enterprise work. The trouble now is that for every industry that is playing fair with public and employees, there are several which are not playing fair, with no intention of giving the public any greater value for its money, or of giving their employees any more money for their services, than they have to do. If there should be another depression coming on us, or if there is another depression around the corner, it is not unfair to say that a good deal of the blame may be laid at the doors of those industries which have not passed along to their employees and to the public a fair share of their prosperity. Business prophets, however, are not doleful as yet. There is still time for industry to give a new deal.

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville

WHAT WE PAY

In some way we pay for everything we have or do in this life of ours, don't we?

If we take everything and give nothing we are parasites and have no right to live, for there is not one of us who has not something—some coin—with which he can pay for his right to be called a citizen of the world. If we want to succeed in life, we pay for that success in various ways; if to be a musician is our goal, then long gruelling hours of practice must lie behind—and before those who would attain the top in this particular branch of art.

A sculptor isn't immediately able to take a block of marble and carve his way to enduring fame; he must spend many an attempt before he can leave something which will endure long after his body has been consigned to its last resting place.

The painter does not come into his glorious heritage of form and color until he has steeped his soul in all that nature has to offer of beauty of tint and shape.

No writer can face the problem of giving people something to read by just sitting at a desk and writing, without having first studied words—how to use them and how to put them together attractively. One may be prolific of ideas, but unless one can clothe these ideas in well fitting words, editors are unsympathetic and the public unappreciative.

And so it is, down the long list of preachers, teachers, statesmen, business men, housewives, doctors, lawyers, and the man who earns his living, working with his hands—all must pay the full price of success. We pay for our sins in remorse that depresses body and soul; and we pay for our poverty in worry and gnawing anxiety. And too, and this is what inspired this article—we pay for our pleasures. I can remember when there was no cinema, and we depended on the opera, drama and concert for our entertainment.

Things would go something like this—as my better half was leaving for work in the morning he'd say "better get down to Ritchie's early, and get our seats for 'Il Trovatore,' or whatever it might happen to be.

And a little while after, mother would give vent to "It's nearly ten and the plan opens at 10.30. So off I'd go—to join dozens of others on the same errand, and often to stand in line for half an hour, if the coming attraction had a universal appeal.

And if it was opera, even in Brockville we paid a dollar or a dollar and a half for decent seats. Well, we paid it, because we were music hungry people, and only went to the things we felt we needed to see and hear, to keep alive a very real part of ourselves.

The other night I was looking at the newspaper notices of the theatre attractions in our two towns.

"Listen to this!" I exclaimed to my family, 'Naughty Marietta' is on, with Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald."

"When and where?" asked the man of the house, and upon receiving the information he stated in no uncertain terms—"Well, we're going."

"Not much like going to opera in the old days," said I, as we left home half an hour before the evening."

"Well, hardly in either money or time," answered friend husband.

For, for 25 cents, we listened to and enjoyed with all our hearts, a presentation of an opera we both loved; magnificently sung, wonderfully filmed; and listened to it in an air conditioned atmosphere and in comfortable seats.

It is a mark of our advancement that opera is now within the reach of everyone. Opera and good drama, for even if one doesn't agree wholeheartedly with the censors in all their presentations, we, whose pocket-books don't allow of promiscuous attendance at the theatre, can find often, and for so little, just what is needed to let us lose ourselves for awhile, and to come away with some lovely music or noble sentiments to ring in our ears till the urge to go comes again.

So some paying is pleasant and profitable, and some in coin of tears and suffering, but no matter which—we pay.

SOME YOUNG TRAVELLERS ARE PUZZLED

BY RUTH DINGMAN HEBB

"Where are we going now and why didn't we stop at Fairy Lake?" asked one young Red-winged Blackbird of another, as they flew along, in company with about 50 other Blackbirds. "I'm getting tired."

"I agree with you," said the second bird. "I'm so exhausted that I could simply drop."

"Wait till we really start migrating in earnest and begin our long trek to the south," put in a third. "They say that it takes ounces off you in solid fat. I suppose we'll be a bit more able to stand the journey a little later on than we are now, but I can't imagine going so far. I think it will kill me."

"I heard your mother telling you that you were too fat, so the exercise will probably do you a world of good," said the second Blackbird unsympathetically. He happened to be a Boholink.

"I'm still wondering where we are going," said the first bird, whose name was Blackie. "We're not even flying south, we're flying northwest. I thought we all ways flew in a southerly direction at this time of year."

"How should I know where we are flying?" answered the second Redwing whose name was Marshal, because of his fondness for the marsh and because when he grew up he would wear brilliant red epaulettes on his wings. "Why don't you ask your mother why we are flying north and where we are going?" If you are so anxious to know."

"I can't ask my mother, because I don't know where she is," answered Blackie very sensibly. "I think I got separated from her about two days ago when there was a big crowd of us flying around together, and then we split up into two groups. I certainly hope I find her again."

"You probably will," said Bubble, who was named Bubble because his song sounded bubbly. "I'll ask my mother if you like. She's around somewhere. He began to look around for his mother and in a few minutes located her at the front of the group of birds. A minute or two later he slowed up and the other two caught up to him.

"What did she say?" asked Blackie and Marshal.

"We are flying in a northerly and westerly direction, because we are making for the Holland Marsh to await migration," he explained. "The folks had planned to stop at Fairy Lake, but it was already too crowded with Blackbirds of different kinds, and they didn't think that there would be enough for everybody to eat.

"They were very much disappointed, but decided that the next best thing was to try the Holland Marsh, which is nice and big, apparently. I've never been there myself, but they say that it's a very interesting place with lots of interesting birds around."

"Are we almost there?" mumbled Blackie. "I'm dying on my wings, I think."

"They said we'd be there in about five minutes," said Bubble, "and to be prepared to be greeted by a mob of relatives and friends. I wish you would get out of my way, Marshal. I always seem to be bumping into you."

"It's you who are in my way," returned the Redwing. "And I don't like being pushed about like that."

Whereupon the two young gentlemen began to quarrel in earnest, diving at each other and trying to get in a few effective pecks. When this had gone on a few minutes, an adult Blackbird decided to intervene.

"Come now, boys," she said sternly. "Stop all that nonsense and be friends. I know that you are both just tired and irritable because you are not used to long flights like this. But we are practically there now. In fact, we are over part of the marsh now and we'll be landing in the reeds in no minute. It was disappointing not to stay at Fairy Lake, but we must just make the best of things and be cheerful."

"Oh, all right," said Bubble, "but do try and fly straight if you can," he begged the other bird, "and don't waver about like you've been doing."

Youth Goes To Reformatory For Burglary Of Yonge St. Station

"You will go to the Ontario Reformatory for a definite period of three months and an indefinite period not to exceed three months, on each of the two charges, the sentences to run concurrently," Magistrate W. F. Woodliffe told Victor Hayward, 20, of Toronto, in police court here on Tuesday.

Evidence was given last week and the magistrate reserved judgment one week. Herbert Gough, 17, Walter Kellar, 19, and Robert Oates, 17, all from Toronto, who also pleaded guilty to the two charges of breaking and entering into the service station of Leonard Chappell, on Yonge and Eagle Sts., and receiving stolen goods, were given suspended sentence and placed on probation for one year.

Hayward had been in trouble before in the juvenile court, his father stated, and as he was the oldest of the group the magistrate told him that he was old enough to know better and that there was too much of this sort of thing going on.

On a charge of manslaughter, Joseph M. Pullan, Atlas Ave., Toronto, was committed for trial after preliminary evidence was given. Bail was renewed at $5000. G. T. Evans, Toronto, represented the accused.

"I am employed at the Triangle service station and I was on the grounds at the time of the accident," testified Stewart Dow. "I knew William LaRoche by sight and I saw him walking south on the west shoulder of the road about four feet from the bank."

"LaRoche was walking slowly and one or two minutes after I saw him the accident occurred. I turned around and saw a cloud of dust made when a car struck the bank then I saw the men come down from the benches in front of the Home. I went over and saw a man lying on the bank and from all appearances he was dead. The body was south of where the dust was kicked up. I saw the car stop south of the Home gate."

"Would the traffic obscure your vision of where LaRoche was walking on the other side of the road?" questioned Mr. Evans.

"Yes, from time to time," answered Mr. Dow.

"What damage was done to the car?"

"The radiator grill on one side was knocked back a little, the fender was dented on the right side, and also the hood was dented. The damages were not sufficient to stop the car from running."

"On my arrival Mr. Pullan told me he was the driver of the car involved in the accident and he gave me his name and address," stated Provincial Constable A. O. Ferguson. "I asked him how it happened and he said he knew nothing more than that pin pricks came in his left eye and that he took both hands from the wheel and placed them over his eyes."

"He didn't know he had hit a man until he stopped the car and ran back and found the man dead. His car was just south of the gates. There was no evidence of brakes being applied. The car travelled 89 feet on the shoulder of the road. I found LaRoche's cap 39 feet from where the body was lying."

"Could the condition of the car have been caused by hitting the bank?" questioned Mr. Evans.

"No, as it was caused by some object higher than the bank," said Constable Ferguson.

"I was present when Pullan made the admission to Ferguson about his eyes," stated Constable J. Sloss.

Dr. J. G. Cock, who examined Pullan, stated that he was suffering from high blood pressure, and hardening of the arteries, and that the analysis of the blood test showed that no alcohol was present.

The blood pressure and artery condition might have caused specks to come in front of the eye but the complaint was never of anything like pin pricks in the eye, although an optic reaction might have been caused, the doctor stated.

Two Toronto boys charged with theft of bicycles were remanded one week when the case will be heard in a juvenile court.

Bail was set at $200 for Howard Seymore, Aurora, charged with having spirits unlawfully. Constable Nichol, R.C.M.P., asked for a remand of one week. Seymore was placed in custody until bail could be raised.

Two charges of driving while intoxicated and reckless driving, laid against Thos. L. Scott, Toronto, will be heard next week. Bail was set at $200. Frank H. Barfett, King township, was also remanded one week on the same charges and bail was set at $500.

POLICE COURT
BITES POLICEMAN
$500 BAIL SET

The hearing of the four charges of resisting a police officer, assaulting a police officer by hitting him, permitting drunkenness in his house, and keeping liquor for sale, laid against Harry Brown, Oak Ridges, in the Newmarket court on Tuesday, will be held on Sept. 2. Bail was set at $500 and the charges were laid

by County Constable A. Crouch.

The magistrate ordered that William Hutchinson, and B. Stables, of Toronto, be summoned to appear at court here next week. Hutchinson laid a charge of theft of a set of drums against R. Conner, who was holding them for the rent and was given custody of the drums for one week provided they were brought to court. Neither Hutchinson nor the drums were at the court.

On a serious charge Bert Stadel, Whitechurch township, was remanded one week in custody without bail being set.

"On Aug. 14, I saw a truck go into the parking ground at Lake Wilcox," testified Constable J. Williamson. "On searching the truck I found two full cases of beer and one part case on ice. The truck was out in full view. The accused said they were having a picnic and that he had bought the beer and brought it up."

"The picnic is an annual affair and we have always brought beer up with us, but we just took a chance on it," stated George C. McCullough, Toronto.

"There is no evidence of selling so I think the charge can be reduced to consuming but I think the penalty should be more than the minimum fine," stated N. L. Mathews, K. C., crown attorney.

The magistrate imposed a fine of $25 and costs of $8, or 30 days, and ordered that the beer be confiscated.

An order to pay wages of $11.75, or ten days, was given to Mrs. Jean Pottage. The complainant was Charles Andrews.

Andrews stated that he was engaged by the day to do the milking. He was to be paid $1 a day. He had only received $1.25 for his work and he had gone back several times but was given nothing.

Mrs. Pottage claimed that Andrews owed her money because he failed to get the milk out early enough in the morning. She stated that she told him she would pay him when she got her cheque at the end of the month.

Five Toronto men were each fined $10 and costs of $8, or ten days, on consuming charges. The charges were reduced from having liquor in an illegal place. All the liquor seized was ordered to be confiscated. All five men were found in cars at Musselman's Lake. Those receiving fines were Gordon Colquhoun, Gordon Orrett, A. H. Stewart, Fred Rowlinson, and Jim Mac-

A warrant was issued for the arrest of John Howling, Toronto, charged with having liquor in an illegal place.

Bail was set at $500 for Thomas Hurst, North Gwillimbury township, charged with having liquor in an illegal place and keeping liquor for sale.

Four charges of driving while intoxicated, reckless driving, not having an operator's permit and leaving scene of an accident, laid against Joseph Morton, Holland Landing, will be heard next week. Bail is $500.

On a reckless driving charge James Huntington, Toronto, was fined $10 and costs, or 10 days. Huntington claimed that he was carrying records in his car and that they slid forward so he couldn't operate the brake.

On a reckless driving charge Les Morton, Keswick, was fined $10 and costs of $13.75, or 10 days. K. M. R. Stiver acted for Morton.

Oliver Hodges, Toronto, stated that he and his brother were driving through Keswick on the civic holiday at about 28 miles an hour. He saw a truck approaching and it made a left hand turn in front of his car without giving any signal.

He swerved onto the gravel but Morton's bumper hit his fender. There was $123 damages done to his car and Hodges received two fractured ribs. Albert Hodges also testified that Morton made the turn without signalling with his hand, but that he heard Morton's brakes squeak.

Constable Bernard Rye, Keswick, showed the court two pictures of the car and truck locked together taken at the scene of the accident by a photographer. The pictures were entered as exhibits. It took four men to pry the car and truck apart. Constable Rye testified.

The driver of the truck, Les Morton, stated that he was bringing his truck down to the garage. He put out his hand and head and looked back on the road, and just then he saw the other car coming right for him. His truck was a little over the line in the centre of the road.

"I am satisfied that Morton was driving in a manner dangerous to the public," stated Magistrate Woodliffe.

EFFECTS OF EMERGENCY SQUAD ALREADY FELT

York county commissioners decided this week to make permanent the recently formed night police patrol of rural municipalities.

The patrolling squad is headed by Sgt. Sidney Barracough, and consists of Constables Watt, Newmarket; Pleury, Aurora; and Crouth, Thornhill. It will have the co-ordination of municipal officers in the ten northern municipalities concerned and of the county officers stationed in Sutton and Toronto.

Since the formation of the patrol there has been a cessation of service station and general store break-ins. It is also hoped that the squad will be able to curb the annual chicken thieving epidemic which breaks out during the autumn months.

ASKS CONTROL OF TRANSIENT TRADE

"Can't something be done about people coming to town with trucks and soliciting business from door to door?" Councillor Arthur Evans asked at the council meeting on Monday.

"We can pass a by-law," Town Clerk N. L. Mathews, K.C., stated. "The cleaners and dyers wanted such a by-law, but when it came to its third reading they found they would have to pay a license as well as the out of town cleaners, and said they did not want it passed."

"The law is like a lot of other laws. It should be revised," Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd stated. "That is the trouble with this country. Laws passed 50 years ago do not work today."

Further consideration given the Dorland application for three wire service to his home on Holton Ave., resulted in the matter being left to the discretion of the light committee.

TOWN WATER PURE M. O. H. DECLARES

"Though the recent spell of hot weather has been accompanied by a lot of sickness, we are free from all children's diseases, such as measles, scarlet fever and whooping cough, and there is no one under quarantine at the present time," Dr. J. H. Wesley, M. O. H., told The Era this week.

"The water continues to be plentiful and of good quality, notwithstanding the disagreeable odor that sometimes comes from the hot water taps in the morning; but every municipality has its water problems to contend with.

"When we know our water is free from disease bacteria, we should be loyal to our town and our utilities. If anyone doubts the purity and quality of our water, let him visit that wonderful Strigley St. well and taste the beautiful clear water as it comes from the filter before it is pumped into the mains."

The recommendation that radios for county police cars patrolling highways in northern York county was discussed last week by the warden and commissioners.

Lustic Heaves Sisman's To 16-13 Victory Over Foundry

Shoemakers Overcome 11-4 Lead To Get Second Place Tie

In a free-hitting contest played under a darkening sky, Sisman's stepped into a second place dead-end with the towners on Wednesday night, by virtue of a 16-13 win over the foundry softballers.

In winning, the shoemakers were forced to come from behind after the second inning after the foundry lads had staged an eight-run scoring spurge to lead 11-4, after the teams had netted three apiece in the first inning.

Sisman's managed to tie it up with six runs in the third spasm and a singled Jim McGee on Wednesday night in the fourth. Lustic replaced Jim McGee on the mound for Sisman's and the foundry got a few hits after that. The shoemakers tallied three in the fifth with the foundry coming within one run of tying the score in the sixth.

Two home runs, from the

ABOUT TOWN

OF REST AND GLADNESS

"Oh day of rest and gladness," the hymn-book said, and as it was written, so it was sung by the congregation of the United church on Sunday morning. And the minister quoted the line as a proper guide to Sunday behavior.

Sitting in the church, listening to the voices of the singers, it seemed right to us that rest and gladness should fill the Sabbath day.

But outside the church it seemed different. We saw young folk playing tennis, youngsters and oldsters motoring to picnics at the beach, and an assortment of people earnestly waving sticks on the golf course. It was very confusing.

It might be a day of rest and gladness to the people sitting in the church pews, but out in the bright glare of the sun, it seemed an entirely different matter. Two things make it so: The fact that not everyone sits in a church pew on Sunday morning, and the fact that "rest" has a different meaning for different people.

To church folk, "gladness" has a different meaning than for non-churchers. And "rest" means something different for the tanner than it does to the lawyer.

The milkman may seek a different rest than would the office worker.

So the Sunday world echoes to the gladness of the saxophone and the gladness of the church choir. The Sunday world offers golf to the office worker and an easy chair to the truck driver. Nor will the scene be changed by law.

If we were asked to frame in words the purpose of the Christian church, we'd say it was to teach people to be Christians. Christians should need no law to teach them to observe the Sabbath. The word's Day act will never make any man a better Christian, even if it takes a golf club or a tennis racket away from him forever. It may be that better Christians could make a better Lord's Day act.

Our personal opinion is that Sunday should be so spent as to enable the spender to return, fit and ready for work—mentally and physically—on Monday. Spiritually... well, we should spend some time in what is termed worship on Sunday, because Sunday is the day most apt for worship. We can see no harm in a man "worshipping" every day of the week, however, and it is upon this that we would like to see the church place more emphasis... then there might be no need for rulings on Sabbath observance.

OUR OLD HOME... WEAK?

Collingwood had had its old home week and is reported to be happy about the whole thing. Collingwood people made whoopee and Collingwood merchants made money.

Aurora has had its old home week and is reported to be as well as could be expected. Aurora people made moan and Aurora merchants were open for business as usual.

Aurora's old home week was not the success that Collingwood's old home week was. The "why" can be found in the history of the jubilee association in Aurora: Fifty people attended the organization meeting, and about that number were appointed to committees. After that, we doubt whether any further meeting had an attendance exceeding ten of those appointed.

A number were appointed for leadership... and none accepted. Rather than see the town's 50th anniversary go unobserved, Aurora's busiest man took on the job. He carried it through, too. But he carried through almost alone. A few members helped and did what they could to make the affair a success. But the men who could have helped most—and the men who, incidentally, would have benefited most—were absent from committee meetings.

In spite of which, Aurora's jubilee was observed—fittingly and properly. That our jubilee was not as great a success as it might have been is due, not to those who led... but to those who lagged.

Credit for the measure of success which Aurora's jubilee attained should go to our mayor and the few who stood by him. If the celebration failed in any way, credit for its failure may properly be given to those who did nothing... or worse—presumed to criticize.

Will Hold York Band Festival In Aurora

Promising to be one of the highest of the high spots in York county's musical year, a band festival which is expected to attract talent both in the county and out of it, is being planned for the end of September, in Aurora.

Representatives of the Ontario Amateur Band Association, and leaders in band activities, met in Toronto with several Aurora business men a few weeks ago to canvass the situation. It was decided that there was a splendid opening for such a festival and a further meeting was called in Aurora on Thursday night of last week.

Representatives from Sutton to Toronto attended the meeting and an enthusiastic reception was given the proposal that the festival be held in Aurora. Facilities in the town were particularly good, it was learned. The performance there of the Mendelssohn choir in the spring had revealed that by a happy accident the arena possessed fine acoustical properties.

The solo classes for band instruments were being deleted from the Canadian National Exhibition program this year, Mr. Robertson, secretary of the Ontario Amateur Bands Association, stated. Plans were made to include an advertisement of the York Band Festival, as it will be called, in the exhibition syllabus. Quick action would be needed.

the meeting decided, and 600 invitations to participate in the festival were mailed out over the weekend. A further meeting is being called for Thursday night in the Aurora council chambers.

H. A. F. Bowman, of Aurora and Toronto, is credited with the original idea of the festival and he has been appointed president of the festival committee. Major H. E. C. Breuls and Reeve Marsh Magwood are two of the executive vice-presidents.

District vice-presidents are being appointed to organize their local areas. Herbert Pruden, well known as secretary of the Mendelssohn choir, is lending his active support to the York Band Festival by taking over the duties of secretary of the latter organization, too.

Classes will be opened in the festival to include bugle and pipe bands, brass bands, etc. Consideration will be given to bands in smaller centres, as it is the primary object of the festival to encourage musicianship everywhere in the county.

Soloists and bands alike will have a choice of selections on which they will be tested. Most of these, it is expected, will be taken from the programs of the Waterloo festival and of the exhibition, so that the time needed for preparation of the test pieces will be shortened, and the festival in general given a greater appeal to the listening public.

Police Radio Much Needed Councillor, Victim Agree

Would Have Town And Business Men Share Cost 50-50

Aurora's chief of police will have a short wave radio if the plan being sponsored by Dr. E. J. Henderson and Archie Cousins is supported by local merchants and the town council, The Era learned this week.

The plan is to instal a short wave radio receiver in Chief Fisher Dunham's car by means of which he could pick up the police broadcast from Toronto. It is felt that this would be of particular benefit in tracking down stolen cars and stolen cars figure in a large number of crimes, sooner or later, it is stated.

"Even if it meant the recovery of only two or three cars a month, I believe it would be worthwhile," Dr. Henderson told The Era.

"We would appreciate constructive criticism of the plan," he added. "And some financial support."

"I think a police radio is badly needed in Aurora," Mr. Cousins stated when interviewed. "I am very much in favor of it."

"If the police had a radio, they would get their tips on stolen cars directly and without loss of time. At present, they are notified by mail and by the time the information has arrived, the bandits are gone and the stolen car has been abandoned."

In reply to a question, Mr. Cousins stated he believed the cost should be defrayed by the merchants and the town on a 50-50 basis.

"I would be willing to subscribe $5 and I believe there are ten other business men ready to do the same. If the town would then add $50, we would have the necessary $100," he said.

New Dairy Is Near Completion

Work on the handsome new home of the Aurora Dairy is being speeded up and the opening date will be announced shortly, C. E. Sparks, the proprietor, told The Era this week.

This type of front is easily kept in a spic-and-span condition and will retain its color and lustre indefinitely.

The dairy proper will be equipped with washer, sterilizer, bottler, pasteurizer, recording and registering thermometers, cooler, brine compressor and refrigerating system, all the most up to date model in their line. The refrigerating system and brine tank are insulated with four inches of cork.

The second floor is made up of two five room apartments, complete with bath. They are insulated with rock wool.

THE OSTREKOFF JEWELS

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

A GREAT NOVEL OF LOVE AND ADVENTURE

INSTALLMENT 24

Anna Remains A Mystery

Colonel Ollastransky, his wife
and his ward, the Princess Elisa-veta Ostrekoff, lunched on the following day in much magni-fence. There had been no difficulty, with his slim, military figure, about buying clothes for the colonel. His black morning coat and dark grey trousers, Burlington Arcade shoes and spats and Scott's silk hat all became him well and helped him to present a dignified and aristocratic appearance. With his wife the "ready-made" shops
had not been quite so successful,
but she, too, was a changed woman.

Elisaveta had found a dark brown costume at the establishment of a famous French dressmaker in which she was more
distractingly beautiful than ever.
They did not repeat their mistake
of the week before and invaded the sacred precincts of the Embassy Club, but descended instead from their hired motorcar before the much humbler premises of the Golden Calf Restaurant in the neighbourhood of Oxford street.
Monsieur Cochot, the proprietor,
struck an attitude at their entrance.
He hastened to relieve himself of the dish he was carrying and came forward all smiles and bows.

"Monsieur la Colonel!" he exclaimed. "Madame! Mademoiselle!
One perceives that things have happened. The good fortune? It is arrived, yes?"

"It is arrived," the colonel assented solemnly. "Mademoiselle no longer, Monsieur Cochot. My ward has received the fortune long promised to her by her parents in Petrograd. With it she takes once more
her title. Behold, Monsieur Cochot,
the Princess Elisaveta Ostrekoff."

Monsieur Cochot bowed and bowed again. He summoned Madame from behind the little counter from which she dispensed wines and aperitifs. They all talked together until the colonel interrupted.

"It is enough," he declared. "The business of the moment is to lunch,
to eat and drink of your best, Monsieur Cochot, and to receive a note
of what, owing to your kindness
and consideration, we still owe you."

Monsieur Cochot wiped a tear
from his eye with the corner of the napkin he had been brandishing.
Nothing could have been more welcome than such a windfall. He bustled his patrons to the best table
in the restaurant, then darted off
to interview the chef. Madame mixed aperitifs with her own hands and graciously accepted one. They were all remarkably gay.

"I wonder," the colonel specu-lated, "what is to happen today—
whether Mr. Haven will produce the jewels or more of these exceedingly pleasant banknotes."

The girl smiled happily.
"I do not very much mind," she confided. "I shall, of course, marry
Mr. Haven. He will deserve it for bringing me this great fortune.
Besides—I like him."

"Elisaveta is right," Madame Ollastransky declared. "The young man pleases me, too. He is handsome and, to judge from what his lady said, of great wealth."

"I am glad that he is rich," the girl reflected, pushing back an unruly strand of hair from her forehead. "I am delighted to know that we shall be rich for all our lives. If he were poor, I think I should reward him in the same
fashion—I should still marry him.
I have grown so weary of our life."

Madame coughed.
"It would be discreet," she suggested, "if the details of what we have been through, of our dear
child's sufferings, for instance, remained locked in our own bosoms
for the present."

"Just at the moment, I think—
what do you say, Henry my dear?
I think no mention at all of the Folies Bergeres, for instance, of the Carlton at Monte Carlo, the negotiation with the Hippodrome here."

The colonel looked around nervously.
"Not a word, my dear," he agreed.
"I am entirely of your opinion."

"It is a matter of common sense,"
the girl declared. "There are one or two friends whom we must forget also. I shall be as nice as I can to Wilfred Haven. Perhaps he will want to marry me very quickly
—that would be better."

There was for a moment something calculating in those beautiful eyes, the mouth seemed a little older, the girl's smile less evident.
It was only a brief interlude, however. A moment later she was sipping her aperitif luxuriously, the cynosure, as usual, of every pair of male eyes in the vicinity.

"I think," Madame Ollastransky assured her, with rather heavy archness, "that when he sees you today he will want to marry you as quickly as you can trot off to a Registry Office."

"I wonder how long it really does take in this country," Elisaveta
speculated. "America is so wonderful for that. You can get up from the luncheon table and come back to dinner married."

"With a Registry Office it is not a long affair," Madame Ollastran-sky verified. "The young man
was very much attracted yesterday, it was easy to see. Today it will be his finish."

"And the good God be thanked," Elisaveta murmured fervently,
"that this time it will be a serious affair. We shall travel. Yes, I have made up my mind about that.
I shall have the most beautiful frocks in the world. I shall have my picture painted by that crazy French artist. We may have a yacht. For certain we shall have an apartment in Paris. There will be enough always for you two," she went on. "Very likely you will live
in one of my houses while we are away. That can be easily arranged."

Madame Ollastransky sighed.
"I remember your mother when she was your age," she mused, "before she became an Ostrekoff. She was the image of you as you are today. She, too, would always wear brown and dark brown fur. But the men who were in love with her!"

"No scandal, my dear," the colonel begged.
Elisaveta smiled.
"Perhaps in time," she meditated,
"there may be as many men in love
with me."

Madame Ollastransky became a trifle didactic.
"My child," she admonished, with
some severity, "let us pray not.
Too many admirers are bad for a beautiful woman, however good and sweet her disposition. Your mother, one could see, was sometimes bewildered with life and her husband was not always happy."

"Oh, la, la!" Elisaveta laughed.
"Look at Pere Cochot's chicken
which arrives!"

Haven, by arrangement, arrived
at Clifford street half an hour before the other three were expected.
Felix Drayton waved him to a seat.

"That's a queer young woman
you rocked across Europe with," he remarked bluntly.

"You have found her then?"
Haven asked.

"Oh, yes, I found her easily enough," Drayton replied. "She was found from the moment you pointed her out to me in the Embassy. She's living in Harford street and I should say that she's mixed up with some exceedingly dangerous people."

Haven folded his arms and sat
back in his chair.
"Go on," he begged. "Tell me the worst."

"She's badly mixed up with those Russians who are streaming into the country," Drayton continued.
"There's a colony of them already settled in London, you know."

"—Bolsheviks, every one of them—
here to do all the mischief they can.
I'm afraid that your young woman,
Anna Kastellane, although she doesn't show up at their premises,
is one of them, all right. That man, Boris Roussky, whom some of the refugees declared was so fiendishly
cruel that the Moscow Committee
sent him over here to save him
from being torn to pieces—the good looking fellow who was with her at the Embassy a week ago—is one of her friends. He was at her flat yesterday for an hour and he was seen with her in the West End
during the morning."

"What I want to know is why she went off with my jewels," Haven
remarked bitterly.

"I'm very much afraid," Felix Drayton confided, "that she was after them all the time—for the Bolsheviks. They collect trifles
like that, you know."

Haven sat looking gloomily into space for some minutes.
"If she has not already handed over the jewels," Drayton went on
—"and I can assure you that she has been watched day and night,
and I have even devised a scheme
to stop her entering the Aldwych premises, if she ever presents herself—there is just one chance of your being able to get them back.
You may not like it, but you must remember that there is some one else concerned besides yourself.
The young lady has been very clever throughout, but she has made a bad mistake—I dare say
you can guess what that is."

"I cannot," Haven replied.
"She had to raise money, I suppose," Drayton continued. "Anyway, she did it. She took one of the emeralds and disposed of it—
disposed of it and she has been paid."

"The scamp," Haven murmured.
"You mean the emerald that was shown to Mr. Haskell?"

Felix Drayton nodded.
"I have rather encouraged that little transaction," he admitted. "It seemed to be the only way of getting a hold upon the young woman.
I have gone so far, Haven, as to guarantee Haskell against loss. He has bought the stone."

Haven bit his lip but he said
nothing. The last hope was gone.
Anna Kastellane was a thief, a common ordinary thief. She had made use of him. He had risked his life for her. This was the way she had repaid him.

"Tell me how it came about Drayton?" he asked at last.

"Very simply," the other replied.
"Lady Bott played bridge at a popular and quite high-class club in the West End of London. One of the members was a Frenchwoman
—a Madame Lafarge—wife of the great jeweler in Paris. It was easy to discover that it was Madame Lafarge who had offered the stone to Lady Bott. It was almost as easy to discover that Madame Lafarge had visited Anna Kastellane twice at her flat in Harford street. The connection once established, everything was easy. A servant at the club saw Madame Lafarge hand over the stone to Lady Bott for valuation on the same day that she had visited Anna Kastellane."

"Why didn't you interfere and stop the sale?" Haven protested.

"Simply because on your behalf I wanted this hold over the young woman," Felix Drayton repeated.
"Now you know how you stand. If it had not been for this single transaction, I am afraid your chance of getting the jewels back
would have been a pretty slim one.
You see, after all, we can dispel what they have in the government
in Russia, but they have passed that law confiscating the jewelry and property of the aristocracy, and if you go to Anna Kastellane this afternoon and demand your jewels,
I should say it is ten to one that
that would be her explanation. It may be true that she has parted with them. If so, it is for you to decide what to do. If she has not,
you can threaten her with the police court. She has tricked you badly enough, but we are one up on her now. Whether she has the rest of the jewels still or whether

she has not, you can send her to prison. She may get away with her story of having handed them
over to the government to whom they belonged, but she cannot get away from the fact that she first
helped herself to one of the stones,
sold it and accepted the money.
Madame Lafarge paid her in bank-
notes."

"It is clever of you, of course,
Drayton, but I hate the whole business," Haven declared. "I'd rather
she had flung them into the sea.
I'd rather a hundred times she had handed them over to her filthy
friends without meddling with them."

Felix Drayton raised his eyebrows.
"Will you give me her address?"
Haven requested.

"She has a flat on the third floor
of No. 4a Harford street," Drayton
replied. "Shall I write it down?"
"You needn't. I can remember it."

"You're going to see her yourself?"

"What else is there to do?" Haven demanded passionately. "She left me lying unconscious at Cromer and decamped with three million pounds' worth of jewels which were in my care. I don't want to go to the police, although you seem to have trapped her, all right. I just want to hear her own explanation from her own lips."

Drayton was toying with a pencil,
drawing a little design on his blot-
ting paper, and made no remark.
"If she really is one of these crazy Bolsheviks," Haven went on,
"and simply sold one of the stones
because she had no money, I guess
I will have to let the whole thing
go. If she has once parted with them, she certainly would never be able to get them back again,
whether she was sent to prison or not."

"I doubt," Felix Drayton mused,
"whether she has parted with them.
I think in all probability, if we sit tight, within a week or two we will hear of another stone upon the market. You'd have her then where she belongs. She couldn't put up her bluff about the jewels
belonging to Russia any longer.
She'd either have to hand them over or go to jail. I don't want to influence you too much, Haven,"
his adviser continued, "but those jewels belong to Elisaveta Ostre-koff. She may accept your money instead, because the poor kid seems to be half starving and she's a decent sort, but the jewels are hers,
and if you carry out your trust as you should, I take it that you ought to chuck sentiment and see that Elisaveta Ostrekoff has what belongs to her."

"I expect you're right," Haven
acquiesced, a little dreadingly.

"You take my tip, my dear fellow," Felix Drayton concluded. "Go
and see the young woman if you want to and have it out with her,
but if you have a fancy for Russians, I should go nap on your little Princess. She's the most beautiful thing I have seen and the sweetest. She's taking this affair very well, too. Some girls would have turned sulky and declared that they wanted nothing

but their jewels."

"She's all right," Haven admitted.
"All the same, you can't alter
things."

Drayton leaned over and patted
his young friend upon the shoulder.
"You'll have to stick it out,
Haven," he enjoined. "Take it straight from me—don't get mixed up with that young woman, Anna Kastellane. I'm sorry if my advice goes against the grain, but I've got to give it to you all the same. She's proved that she's a wrong 'un, proved it up to the hilt. Cut her out."

There was a discreet knock at the door. Punctual to the moment,
the three expected visitors had arrived.

July 13th, 1938.

The Manager,
Bell Telephone Company of Canada,
St. John's, Que.

Dear Sir:

I am writing you on behalf of my mother, father and our family regarding the accident near Lacolle last Saturday, in which my brother and sister were seriously injured.

It is impossible to find words to express our thanks to you for what you did to help this accident, and for what your telephone company's men who were at the scene of the accident? This may have been yourself; we do not know who it was, except that he is an employee of the Bell Telephone Company. We are told it was through this man's knowledge of First Aid that my sister was allowed to live.

I assure the majority of the travelling public are like ourselves, and do not realize what Bell Telephone First Aid means, until it does for them what it has done for us.

Again our sincerest thanks.

I remain,

Most sincerely yours,

WALTER W. CREEGAN

PAUL OUELLETTE

... Bell Telephone Plant Wire Chief Walter Cregan
and Manager Paul Ouellette of St. John's, were nearby
when two automobiles collided. While Cregan—a skilled First Aider like 95 per cent of all
our outside plant workers—administered First Aid, Ouellette summoned help by telephone. We are proud that their quick action saved another precious life.

S. R. STEVENS,
Manager.

Mount Albert

The August meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. B. Sinclair on Thursday of last week. The president, Mrs. Price, occupied the chair.

During the business part of the program the ladies decided to buy blinds for the new hall, also a motor and pump to flood the rink in the winter and assist the trustees if they decided to teach music in the continuation school.

It was grandmothers' day and they gave the program. Mrs. Hall had prepared a paper on the 30 years' history of Mount Albert branch and Mrs. Stokes read some interesting news items from a very old scrap book.

Many of the members, after many years, heard the announcement of their weddings again and other affairs in the community long ago. The grandmothers also sang several old familiar songs.

Mrs. Ralph Willis of Pine Orchard, the district president, was present and spoke to the ladies. A delightful lunch was served at the close of the program and an exhibit of the grandmothers' work, which was all very nice, was shown.

The work most worthy of mention was a lovely candlewick bedspread just finished and made by Mrs. Ben Cook, who had just celebrated her 86th birthday.

Mrs. Cook certainly does not believe in being idle and is to be congratulated on keeping up with the times.

Mrs. D. Cook spent the weekend at the home of her sister, Mrs. Cook, of Woodbridge.

Mr. Alvin Dike of Lindsay spent the weekend at his home in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harman were visitors this week at the home of Mr. Harman's father, Mr. John Harman.

Mrs. John Watts of Brampton has been visiting her son, Mr. Ed. Watts.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Watts of Newmarket were guests of Mrs. Watts' sister, Mrs. H. Shillinglaw, on Sunday.

Miss Theodore Harrison of Kapuskasing has been visiting her mother, Mrs. H. Harrison, for the past few weeks.

Mrs. Percy Thompson and Master Edward, of Toronto, have been visiting friends in town the past week.

Mrs. King and Miss Jean King of Dresden were weekend visitors at the home of Mrs. Lyman Pearson.

Mr. Art. Harrison, who has been very ill at the General Hospital in Toronto, was brought back to his home here on Monday.

Mrs. H. Longhurst and Betty returned home on Sunday from a week's visit with friends at Orillia.

Mr. and Mrs. Crowle returned last week from a delightful holiday spent on the St. Lawrence River. They also visited the Thousand Islands and Ottawa.

KESWICK PAY TRIBUTE TO FINE SPORTSMAN

The largest crowd of fans to ever witness a softball game in this district was present at Keswick on Monday night to see an "All Star" team, managed by James Deane and picked from the Lake Simcoe softball league and Newmarket, defeat Keswick, the league leaders, by the score of 11-3 in the Jack English memorial game.

The game was officially opened with Bill English pitching the first ball, Reeve Morton at bat and W. S. Robertson, president of the Lake Simcoe league behind the bat. Reeve Morton took a heavy swing at "Pitcher English's" offering, which resulted in a foul ball, not caught by Catcher Bill Robertson.

The game was very closely fought until the last inning when the "All Stars" batted six runs, off Pitcher Laughton, to put them well out in front of the Keswick team. McNeil of Willow Beach and Anderson of Baldwin divided the pitching duties for the "All Stars."

At the beginning of the fourth inning two minutes' silence was observed for the late Jack English, and the large crowd and players stood with bowed heads in memory of a "great sport among sportsmen." Owing to the slippery condition of the field all extra events had to be cancelled.

Byron King of Keswick supplied a loud speaking system for the game and a "local Foster Hewitt" kept the large crowd of fans informed of the different players, names, etc. It is hoped by many followers of the games that Byron will consent to be present at the Lake Simcoe League play-offs with his amplifiers, as they are a great asset to any ball game.

The "All Star" team included: McNeil and Fairbairn, Willow Beach; Smith, Peters and Cunningham, Newmarket; Lunney, Zephry; Sharon, Baldwin; Bill Newfield; Anderson; Robertson; Mount Albert; Boag and Burkholder, Queensville.

Keswick team: Fillet, Hodgins, Laughton, Tomlinson, Prosser, Morton, R. Connell, Trivett, Waldon, Badlen, L. Connell and Mahoney. Umpires, McLeod Brothers.

QUEENSVILLE CHANGE DATE FOR POPULAR SINGERS

Owing to their extended tour of the United States the date for the famous Jubilee Singers has been changed from Sept. 5 until Sept. 29. Because of their popularity, Sept. 29 is the only open date for this fine group of singers until next spring.

It is hoped that this change of date will not in any way hinder any one from attending. Sept. 5 did fall on Labor Day and perhaps the new date after all will be more satisfactory.

DISPLAY OF CHINA GIVEN AT W. I.

The August meeting of Elmhurst W. I. was held at Mrs. M. Sedore's home on Wednesday last. There was a very interesting program which was enjoyed by all.

After the reading of minutes and dispensing of business, a most interesting account of chinaware was given by Mrs. L. Pollock.

She stated it received its name because the Chinese people, hundreds of years ago, were the first people to make chinaware.

A display of different makes of china was then examined.

A number of residents of the beach added greatly to the program by rendering songs and solos, accompanied by a clever young banjo player.

A dainty sandwich luncheon was then served by the hostesses, which was enjoyed by all present.

Mrs. Fred Lockerbie received some mail on Saturday last from her daughter, Muriel, who's husband, Mr. J. Thoms, is a buyer for the Hudson Bay fur company at Pangnirtung, Baffin Land, saying they would be home in September.

This letter was written in February. The "Nasopia" left Montreal on July 11 for the north, calling at all the Hudson Bay Company's points and will be at Pangnirtung about Sept. 20 on its way back. Mr. and Mrs. Thoms and little Sandra will come on it to Halifax arriving about Oct. 4 for a year's leave.
